

THE OLD BOYS OF TINDAL STREET

It wasn't common for Junior Schools to erect a memorial to former pupils who were killed in the war, but we have at least one in Balsall Heath. Our latest stopping point for Balsall Heath's WW1 memorials brings us to Tindal Street School.

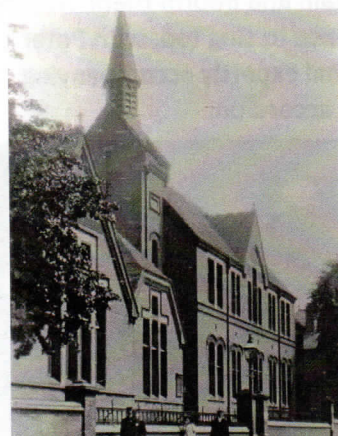

The memorial is a wooden board/ tablet which has suffered water damage. Its current location is uncertain, but given that the school has disposed of a lot of items in the last few years, it is possible it has been "rescued" and is at somebody's home. The photograph was taken by a Mr. Larkin.

I will ask the school about the location and report an update. It does currently survive somewhere and has been posted online. We can also make out all the names upon it, which are as follows:-
